

This Week in the Whittier Pollinator Garden

August, 2017

A snapshot of what's happening in the garden this week.

Late summer in the Pollinator Garden. The Milkweed seed pods have formed. Goldenrod steals the show. Purple Coneflower and Phlox are still blooming, and Indian Hemp is poised to change color soon. Bees are constantly feeding on flowers and monarchs make regular appearances.

Common Milkweed, Asclepias Syriaca, shows off its fully formed seed pods.

Canada Goldenrod (Solidago Canadensis)

We mulched and weeded.

Garden Phlox (Phlox Paniculatum)
